Communicating with our constituents

You've read the 1997 Office of Surface Mining Annual Report. Now experience it. Visit www.osmre.gov, the Office of Surface Mining interactive Annual Report on the World Wide Web. You can:

- See a color version of this report.
- Compare 1997 report information with past years' statistics.
- Download text and tabular information for use on your computer.
- Request additional information or publications cited in the report.
- Provide feedback and comments to the Office of Surface Mining.

And if financial information is a mystery to you, visit the web site to read our Guide to Understanding Financial Statements, a hypertext resource that explains the financial statement and terms.

The Office of Surface Mining's web site was launched in the Fall of 1996, giving anyone with Internet access the freedom to choose information about the Surface Mining Law and its implementation at any time. It's a one-stop information resource that contains a wide range of information about the Office of Surface Mining. For example, sections include phone and office directories, historical archive of press releases, the Surface Mining Law, changes to the regulations, a list of news clips, events and activities, Abandoned Mine Land information including online connection to the inventory of abandoned mine hazards, research results, appropriation and budget statistics, photo library, educational pages, and links to state regulatory and Abandoned Mine Land programs. In the one year since the web site has been fully operational, visitor use has grown to almost 20,000 hits per day. And, the site is updated daily, so it's continually providing the most current information available.
